

As a Network and as individuals and organizations:

We promote and support efforts to establish compassionate end-of-life care homes in our local communities and nationwide.

We acknowledge there is no one model that best serves all communities. We respect that varying types of organizations are necessary to meet local community circumstances.

We respect the views of all members.

We share our knowledge and tools with one another while respecting the experience and intellectual properties of all members.

We support the mission of the Omega Home Network (OHN) and will diligently protect it locally and nationally.

We agree that the network is designed to benefit all members. Just as the network provides support to the members, members must support the network.

We agree to coordinate opportunities that have both a national and local benefit, with an understanding that the local organization remains the primary contact and will receive direct benefit from successful endeavors.

Peer Support

The best resource for homes for the dying is the expertise of our members who are willing to share their advice, experience, and knowledge in order to help with the development of this model for EOL care.

OHN members can look to other members for support and guidance as new issues arise.

OHN members will volunteer to answer questions and provide support to other members.

As a member of the OHN, I recognize my responsibility to uphold the Core Values and participate actively in the Network, including Peer Support, responding to surveys, submitting data on services, and attending the Annual Conference when possible.
